CJ and Devan were perfect examples of brotherhood. They were always there for each other.

CJ was older than Devan, so he really watched out for his little brother and took care of him.

Devan, being younger, always respected CJ and listened to what he said.

Together, they were a great team.

The nice thing about CJ and Devan was that their brotherhood extended to others too because their Mom always taught them to treat everyone like they treated each other.

One day, CJ and Devan were at the movie theatre with their cousin, Jesh. They went to see the new Adventures in Human Values movie called 'We Can Move Mountains.'

After they sat down in their seats, a boy started throwing popcorn in Jesh's hair.

Devan saw this, so he turned around and said, "Please stop throwing popcorn at my brother."

The boy stood up and exclaimed, "He's not your brother! He doesn't even look like you!"

CJ saw what was going on, so he stood up and said in a strong tone, “These two are both my younger brothers and we’ve come here to watch a movie. Please leave them alone.”

The boy immediately said, “I’m sorry,” and sat down because CJ was older and bigger.

The next day, CJ and Devan went to play baseball at the park. CJ was a team captain, so of course he selected Devan first.

As they were coming to the last players, they noticed a little boy named Devandra, who nobody wanted to pick simply because he was small and quiet.

Devan knew this was wrong, so he told CJ to pick Devandra next.

CJ picked him and immediately the kids on the other team started making fun of Devandra.

Both CJ and Devan said, “Quit making fun of him. He can play! He is our brother!”

The kids stopped, and Devandra looked shocked because nobody had ever stood up for him like that.

Devandra ended up being one of the best players on the team because CJ and Devan gave him the opportunity to shine by sharing their brotherhood.
